Editor's Note

Concordia Year One is the first Concordia Yearbook. It is hoped that this book will reflect the motto of Concordia salus.

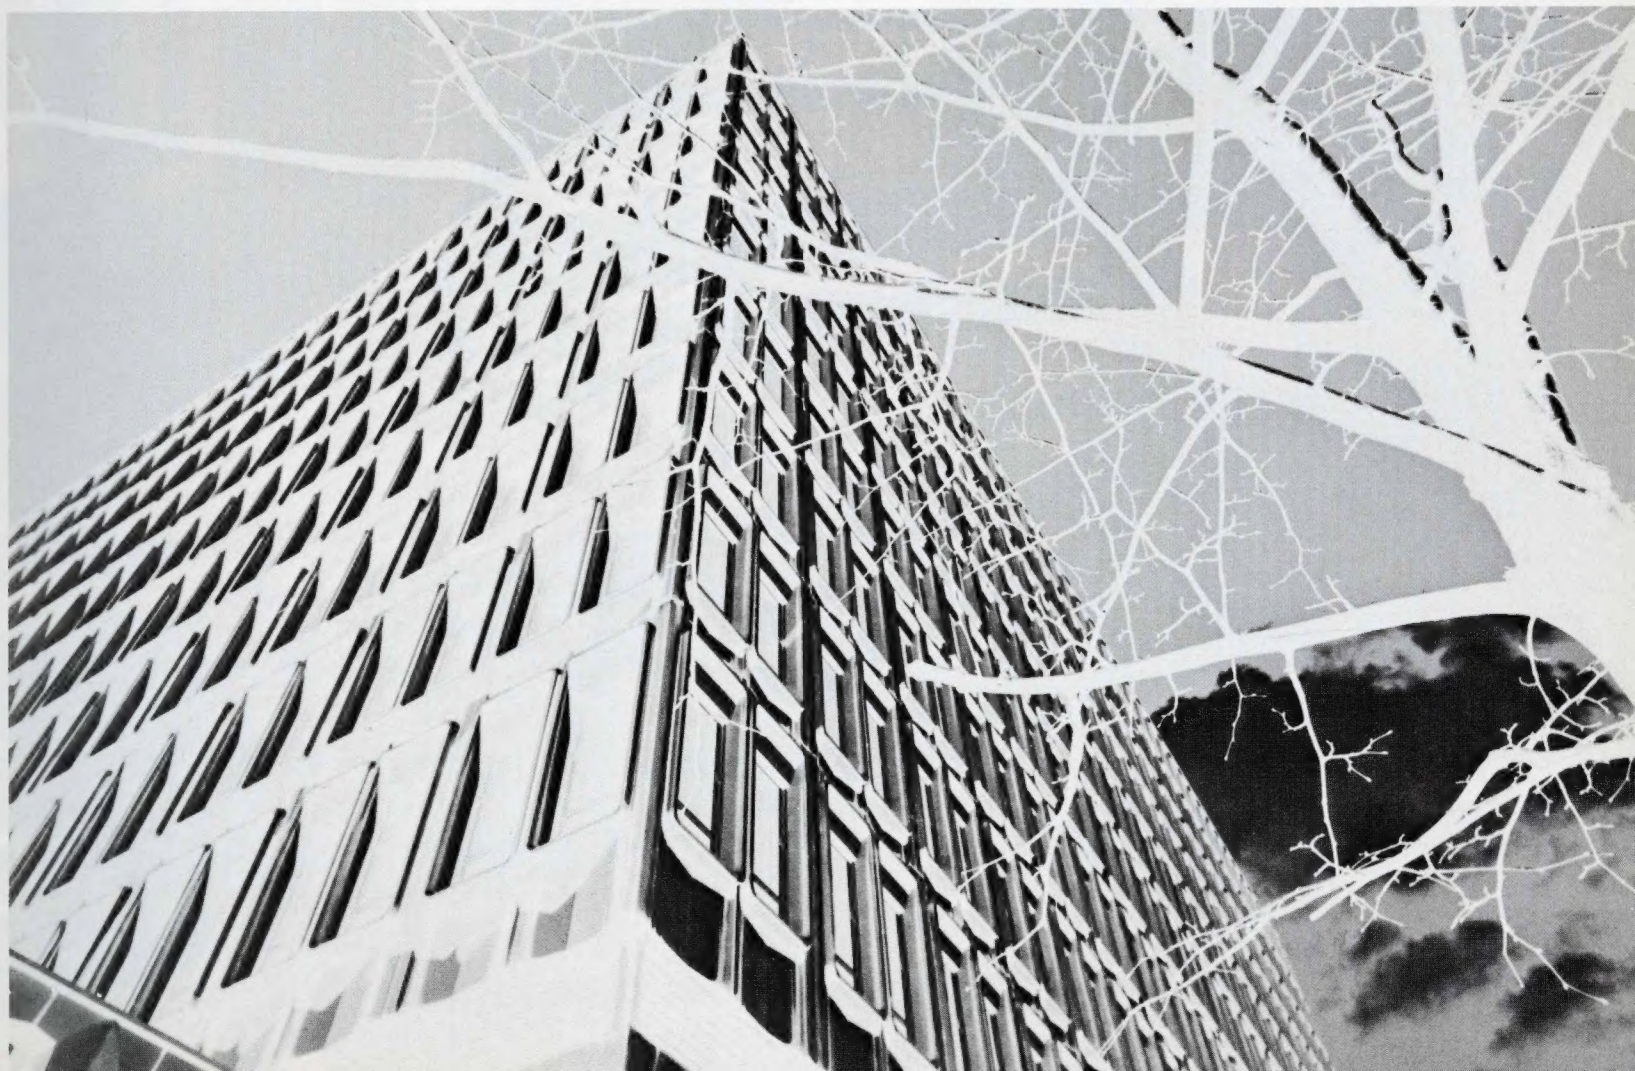

My apologies for the late arrival of this book. But this was unfortunately due to unforeseen circumstances in producing such a large book.

I would like to thank the following people who helped me carry this book through: Dave Haney, Dave Gersovitz, Sam Blum, Murray Kronick, John Chaput.

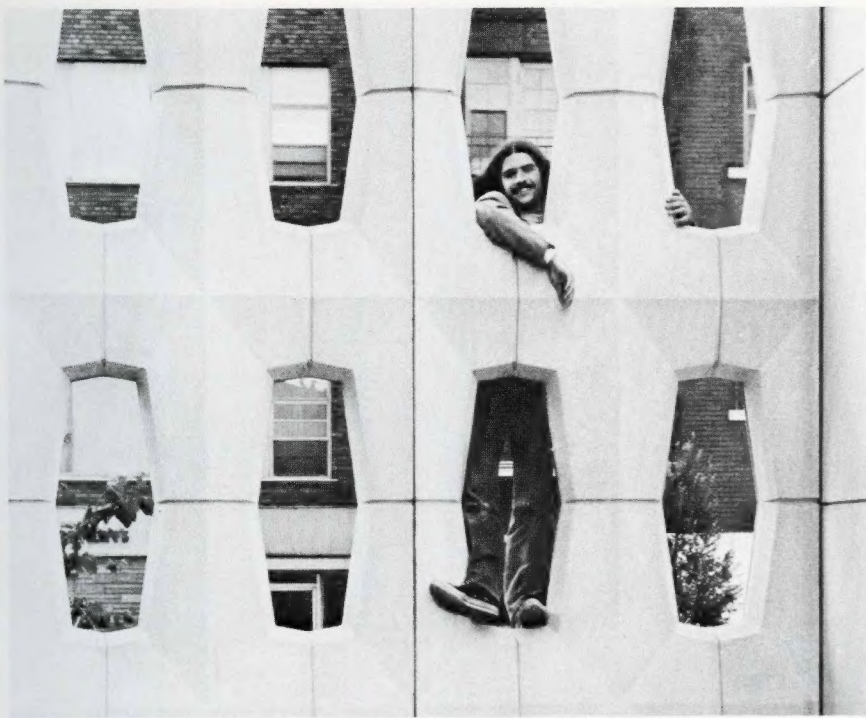

I would like to thank both the Loyola Students' Association and the Sir George Day Students Association.

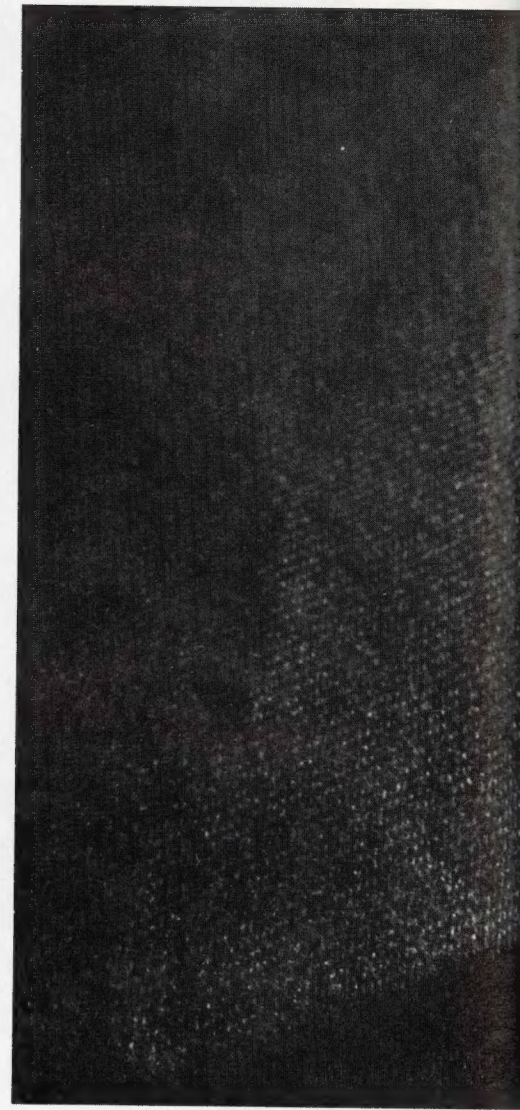

There is also one person without whom this book would not have been published. A very special thanks, Paul Patterson.

Contemplations on the Past

As this academic year draws to a close we are also nearing the end of a second year of life in the two-headed university called Concordia. If anyone considers this enough cause to pause and reflect, their contemplations will undoubtedly still be tinged by their old school's colours.

Many Loyolans are still asking, now with more sadness than force, the time-worn question: "What ever happened to Loyola"? Meanwhile downtown amid the hue of de Maisonneuve Boulevard, other students are still trying to discern whether they are Concordians or Georgians. Of course the more task-oriented Sir George Commerce students are simply trying to dodge the rushing traffic.

For the rest, life goes on. Many Sir George students are more cynical this spring as their friend and partner-in-life, information officer Malcolm Stone was fired in early February. Malcolm always had an answer to the rhetorical question: "Hey, what's happening?" Malcolm knew where it was at - I guess that was what administration thought was his problem.

Now he sits amid the rolling hills of the townships. Old Mal wouldn't have much problem answering another rhetorical question: "What ever happened to Concordia?" He really knew where it was at.

"What ever happened to Loyola?" you asked. Well it is not all gone. People, if not colleges, sometimes come back from the dead. A little soothsaying: they're gonna fire Peter Bringolf of Audio Visual pretty soon. He's on suspension now, but mud soon turns to stone and with the amount of mud they're slinging around here there may soon be two "concrete campuses" at Concordia. But not to worry, at Loyola people still talk to each other. There are enough social psychologists around, that people still feel. Look out - ivory melts in the sun! and at Loyola "the sun also rises" for Peter will come back to us soon. Is there life after death?

But why paint it black? Who the hell knows what a leopard was doing at the 16,000 foot level of Kilimanjaro anyway? Let's talk about the living for awhile, nobody said this had to be a true story. Reggie Parry is still living. He's so old nobody knows how young he is. They will name the new Sir George pub after him. Yes, it opens next year, and does very well and nobody gets too high (they only do that in the faculty club) but no one stays low, especially not after Reggie shows up and asks "Hey, what's happening?" He answers the question himself, dancing with everyone, but with none, with himself. Reggie not only knows "what's happening", he knows where it's happening. He knows that it's going on everywhere.

Everywhere my friend? What about the bathroom wall I just read: 'let the niggers burn'?

"Ah no man, that's old stuff from back in '69. It's just etched in steel, they can't remove it."

"Ya it's old alright. But it's not etched, it's carved. Carved in stone. But there's new stuff and it's just as bad and still sucks in '76. What ever happened to all those marching, charging feet? What ever happened to candles in the rain?"

"Ah candles don't stay lit in the rain, man. Everybody knows that."

"Ya everyone knows that. We don't get fooled again, eh man."

"That's right. 'Pick up your guitar and play, just like yesterday'."

"Finish up your beer, we're late for class."

And on and on we go. And sometimes things even get better. Student government got better this year. It was always good at Loyola, but this year it was even better. Chris and Brian and Michael and Gervase. Who will ever forget the sight of Brian, that blond Aryan god, and Gervase that hoary old guru, drinking beer in Senate? "But Brian, what are you doing drinking beer with Gervase? You're not like him you always put your hand over your mouth when you cough. What! You're his brother and sister! You're what? Oh, you believe in the equality of the sexes. But Brian if you don't stop taking baths, how will we tell the good boys from the crazies. We won't be able to? Brian, but Brian, ..."

Well they tried. They tried to tell him what democracy was and why it was better than autocracy and why less computers would get burnt that way, but they never really understood. "To the bunker men the students are coming again." Through explanations some things did get done. During the process of establishing the CCSL (Concordia Council on Student Life) to oversee the newly merged student services on the two campuses (remember the Board of Governors slipped it in over the summer without asking anybody?) they managed to teach a few people a few things.

They were helped by Dave Clamen and Terrance Regan and a few of the other people from the Day Students' Association who weren't directly involved in student services like Donald Chambers and Miguel, 'til he had to leave because he had no more money. In the end they taught a few people a few things, and learned a lot themselves. Students will comprise 50% of the members of CCSL next year; there may not be a just society but occasionally there is justice.

And ya, once they marched. The students actually marched! They marched to the metro but not to go home. They marched to the metro, to go to the east end (You know - past Morgan's) to meet other students and to march some more and hear some speeches and finally to march all the way to city hall. They say that you can't fight city hall and they're right, but at least somebody tried for once. The metro still costs 50 cents, but at least they tried and they finally marched with their Québécois brothers and sisters, instead of against them, or in spite of them. They marched and they sang songs and the administration closed down the school for the afternoon and Dean of Commerce Andrew Berczi thought it was good that the students were marching and singing songs. "It was sort of like a carnival", said he. Well, that's progress.

Administration never closed down the school before, except when they were using the classrooms for temporary prisons and there was smoke and water everywhere. ("my child if those computers had only burnt brightly, instead of blackly, my, my how they might have shed some light on the subject.")

The march lit the old spirit (it sparked a memory of the spirit of others who have long since passed.) In November the Loyola students voted to join ANEQ (l'Association Nationale des Etudiant de Quebec.) Only seven percent of Loyola students voted, but those who did, voted with their minds and not with their feet. They voted to continue the solidarity of that night in October when they marched to city hall together.

For Sir George students, the march in October was enough and they voted, just yesterday, to join. Who said that Sir George has a good history department? Nobody has taught the Georgians that if you don't join the struggle early, you usually have to join it later, for longer.

Well, enough of political activists and political non-activism. Let's talk about happier things. How did Concordia's athletes do this year? Well, they didn't fight as much. They merged the Loyola and Sir George sports department, you know, and now they call the teams the Stingers and now they have to find other people to fight (the hockey team that is) and they lost a lot (except the hockey team had time to win as well as fight) and the weather was kinda nice this winter. And say did you catch that sunset yesterday evening?

Those who are graduating this spring will not be as lucky as students who graduated at fall convocation last year. They had to share the stage with David Azrieli. Concordia gave Dr. Dave an honorary degree for helping to build up Concordia and tear down the Van Horne mansion. If Lady Macbeth only had a university in her kingdom, she wouldn't have had to fret about all the blood on her hands.

But I have told you far too many morbid tales today. It's spring. Time of new graduates and new hope. Out at Loyola the grass is green and the trees are budding. Downtown the sidewalk doors of Casa Pedro are open again and as a result the sangria is all the more delightful. In the spring all the voices are gone for awhile and we can laugh freely once again.

New, fresh blood surges through our limbs and strains of "For Ever Young Drift" drift easily across the land, unchallenged. It's all over, the darkness is all over! We were able to stare down the blackness within and come out all the stronger for it.

"Ah, but I was so much older then, I'm younger then that now." And on and on we go.

Wilding in the Streets

Quebec City [Reuters, CUP, IN, OUT, UPI, CP, AC-DC, Southam, AP] — At a hastily-called press conference held yesterday afternoon in lower-city topless bar "Chez Boum-Boum", Premier Robert Bourassa and members of his cabinet revealed new amendments to his government's controversial Bill 22.

Citing pressure from Minister of the Environment concerning the mounting air issue, Bourassa confirmed the rumour that not all Quebec residents would be allowed to breathe. The announcement left the assembled reporters gasping.

Bourassa, dressed in a frilled pink chiffon blouse and sporting a red and black armband (matched by a suede shoulder bag with darling little buckles) announced that "breathing in Quebec is a privilege, not a right. But don't worry, the gouvernement has allowed for various interpretations of the bill and a quota system will be implemented.

"Under the new section of the bill, citizens of Quebec must demonstrate that they have a working knowledge of their lungs otherwise they will not be allowed to breathe the air of their choice. Also, only those who can prove that their ancestors have breathed fluently for a number of generations will be allowed oxygen.

"However, all citizens of Quebec are granted the right of buying compressed air in tanks from a newly-formed government agency.

"Children as well will be affected. Children already enrolled in school will be allowed to keep breathing, although first-time school children must go before a review board and answer questions about breathing before they will be allowed to breathe."

Questions such as "When is a windpipe not a windpipe?" "Does the word 'larynx' end in the letter y or z?", "What's the Tahitian word for 'lung'?" and "Through how many blood vessels would a corpuscle flow if a corpuscle could flow through?" may be included in the test for pre-schoolers.

In response to a question from a gas-masked journalist, Bourassa said, "If families want to set up Saturday morning lung-instructional programs for their children, the government cannot stop them. These parents are perfectly within their rights, er, privileges.

"Also, some parents have expressed fears that their children will be separated into breathing and non-breathing factions. For example, a child already enrolled in school will be allowed to continue breathing. However, if a younger sibling fails to pass the breathing exam, then he will not be allowed to breathe. There must be some sacrifice for the benefit of the majority."

Asked what would happen if one of his children were pushed into a non-breathing category, Bourassa answered, "Naturally, I would send him out of the province so that he may obtain a fully-balanced lung development."

Bourassa went on and talked about other sections of the bill that he is trying to pass in the national assembly.

"Among other things in Bill 22, the government hopes to pass new and exciting features for the people of Quebec. For example, Section 31-48-18-yellow-hup-hup-hup, subsection 156790315741, article un, will incorporate Madame Benoit as the patron saint of cooking of Quebec. As well, an engraving of Brother Andre's heart will appear on the back of Quebec-minted coins, replacing the portrait of the Queen.

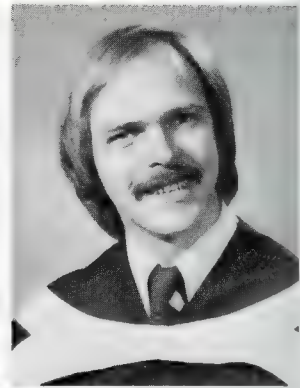

"Also, the government is considering handing out uniforms to strikers and to those who are unemployed. Considering these two factions form a considerable portion of the population of Quebec, the garment industry will be given a shot in the arm.

"As well, the government will distribute tons of steel wool to the rural communities of Quebec so that the people can knit stoves in the winter."

However, at this point in the news conference, a number of Quebec citizens who seemed to be included in the non-breathing quota, began a demonstration near the pinball machines and stacks of magazines, chanting, "Choke, choke, choke!" The Security Service quickly herded the demonstrators into an air-tight room and turned on the vacuum cleaners.

Health Education

Health Education is concerned with the present health of our community and in planning for the health needs of the future. The goal of our programmes is to help individuals and society realize a state of complete physical, mental and social well-being, not merely the absence of disease or infirmity.

In practical terms, the aim of Health Education is to enable health practitioners to be more understanding and responsive to the growing sophistication and changing attitudes of the public towards the prevention of disease and the maintenance of health. Our programmes seek to relate scientific, humanistic and professional knowledge in the assessment of health needs. Those who participate in our programmes become aware of the vital relationships of individual and social well-being, lifestyles, environment and human biology.

Health Education offers programmes leading to:

B.A. Specialization Community Nursing (90 credits)
B.A. Major Community Nursing (90 credits)
Certificate in Community Nursing (45 credits)
Certificate in Health Education (42 credits)

Community Nursing Programmes

As social attitudes change towards health maintenance and disease prevention, nurses must remain aware of these changes. The nurses should learn to be more health oriented than disease oriented; individual oriented rather than institutional oriented; and more accountable to the individual and the community rather than to the physician and institution.

The purpose of the programme is to offer further education to experienced nurses working in community settings such as schools, industry, community clinics, doctors' offices, hospital services and other agencies. Consideration has been given to the nurse's emerging role as a member of the multi-disciplinary health team and her interests in the field of community nurse practitioner, health administrator, health educator and other specialities. Courses, therefore, are designed for their relevance to society and professional needs in general, and to the needs of students and individuals specifically.

The curriculum will provide the graduates with a knowledge of the basic and behavioral services and thus prepare them to assume leadership in adapting health care to the individual and community. This means that they will make nursing diagnosis and institute appropriate care. Equally important the graduates will know their limitations and when to use appropriate medical and other referral services as necessary.

Certificate in Health Education

The measure of the "well-being" of a community is much more than just an analysis of life expectancy, disease incidence and cause of illness. Any health policy that aims to improve the health state of people must also take into account the mental and social health, the environment, and the lifestyles of people.

The purpose of this Certificate is to answer the needs of society as proposed by the Parent Report and further elaborated in the Castonguay Report. The Certificate will provide the educational foundation for effective health action in the community and make students aware of the social, cultural, psychological, behavioral and educational processes that make up a successful health field strategy.

The Certificate provides allied health workers with the opportunity to become more effective in their work and professionally more competent.

DIRECTOR, J. STIRLING DORANCE

The Development Office of the University is responsible for a host of activities designed to involve the community locally in support of our educational programs.

The Development Office conducts a variety of programs aimed at finding private funds for buildings, endowments, student aid, innovative programs and research.

The Development Office also provides office staff and services to the Alumni Associations of Sir George Williams and Loyola, as well as working in close liaison with all departments of the University in the financing of projects of individuals and groups.

DIRECTOR, MATTHEW RAM

GENERAL INFORMATION

Started informally by the Guines Pig Class of 1937 (the first graduating class).
Incorporated officially as a non-profit organization, September 21st, 1957.

THE AIMS AND OBJECTIVES ARE:

- To preserve the fellowship of graduates of Sir George Williams.
- To preserve, extend and promote the interest of the University.
- To assist in the furthering of Student Welfare.

ACTIVE (CONTRIBUTING) MEMBERSHIP PROVIDES:

Free membership in the SGW Library.
Communications with more than 13,000 graduates through "The Garnet", the Association's newspaper which is published 8 times a year.

DIRECTOR, CHRISTY McCORMICK

GENERAL INFORMATION

Known as the Loyola Old Boys' Association from 1906 to 1935. In 1935, it became the Loyola Alumni Association and was incorporated in 1971.

THE AIMS AND OBJECTIVES ARE

The objectives of this association shall be to advance the interests and to promote the welfare of Concordia, of the Association and its members, and to provide a vehicle through which former students of the Loyola Campus of Concordia University may maintain their interest and express their support of their alma mater, to disseminate information among former students.

ACTIVITIES

During the course of the year, The Loyola of Montreal Association Inc. sponsors the Gold Tournament, the Sports Hall-of-Fame, cultural activities, the Past-Presidents' Dinner, an exchange programme between students and members of the Business / Professional community, information sessions by well-known speakers for the benefit of the University students and many other events catering to both men and women graduates. The Association also sponsors the selection and presentation of the Loyola Medal to outstanding Canadians. A General Meeting is held each year. At this meeting, officers and directors for the coming year are elected and all other matters of general business transacted.

Annual giving by Alumni represents the largest single source of support to universities and colleges in North America. A regular yearly contribution to the Association aids a variety of programmes at the University.

The Office of Alumni Affairs is located at 7306 Sherbrooke Street West. Information can be obtained at 482-0320 - Local 402.

Active Membership - 9,000.
